Frankie Foster Is Sighted Today As Purchaser of Gun

Man Arrested in California Indicted in Connection With Lingle Death

WILL BE RETURNED

Witness Tells of Selling Gun to Foster Some Time Ago

CHICAGO, July 2.—(AP)—The first active steps toward dealing with the assassin of Alfred (Jack) Lingle came today with the indictment of Frankie Foster, following his arrest in California.

Courier H. N. Brunson and Peter von Franzus said that the bullets found in the body of Lingle were fired from the gun sold to Foster.

"I am preparing a list of questions for Foster to answer," Roche said. "It may be that if he answers them all truthfully it will not be necessary to bring him to Chicago, but if it is, we will ask his indictment for the Lingle murder as he is at least an accomplice if not the actual slayer. Having guilty knowledge alone makes him an accomplice if he does not divulge his knowledge."

Roche had obtained some information of value regarding the Lingle murder from the nine men and one woman seized last night in two raids on headquarters of the Moran-Aiello gang, with which Foster formerly was affiliated and against which suspicion of the Lingle murder had been directed. Whether the information concerned Foster, he would not say.

Prisoner Given Grilling

It was known that he and Assistant State Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, who has charge of the investigation of the Lingle murder, spent a good part of last night questioning Grover Dillard, one of the prisoners. They said they had been seeking Dillard ever since Lingle was slain. Dillard had been employed at the Sheridan-Wave gambling house, the operations of which were brought into the Lingle investigation and besides parking his revolver each day at a cigar store frequently visited by Lingle, he was seen near Lingle shortly before the reporter was killed.

Both Roche and Rathbun were optimistic after the arrests of Foster and Dillard. It was indicated that they believed they are on the right trail.

Detectives Leo M. Anderson and John Scherping of the state attorney's office were responsible for the arrest of Foster and his companions in Los Angeles. They led Los Angeles police to an apartment in an exclusive residence section where Marvin Apler, alias Hart; Frankie Fisher, George Davis, Herman Walters and a woman who gave the name of Mrs. Frank Bowman, but who was believed to be Foster's wife were found with the Chicago gangster.

Owned Murder Revolver

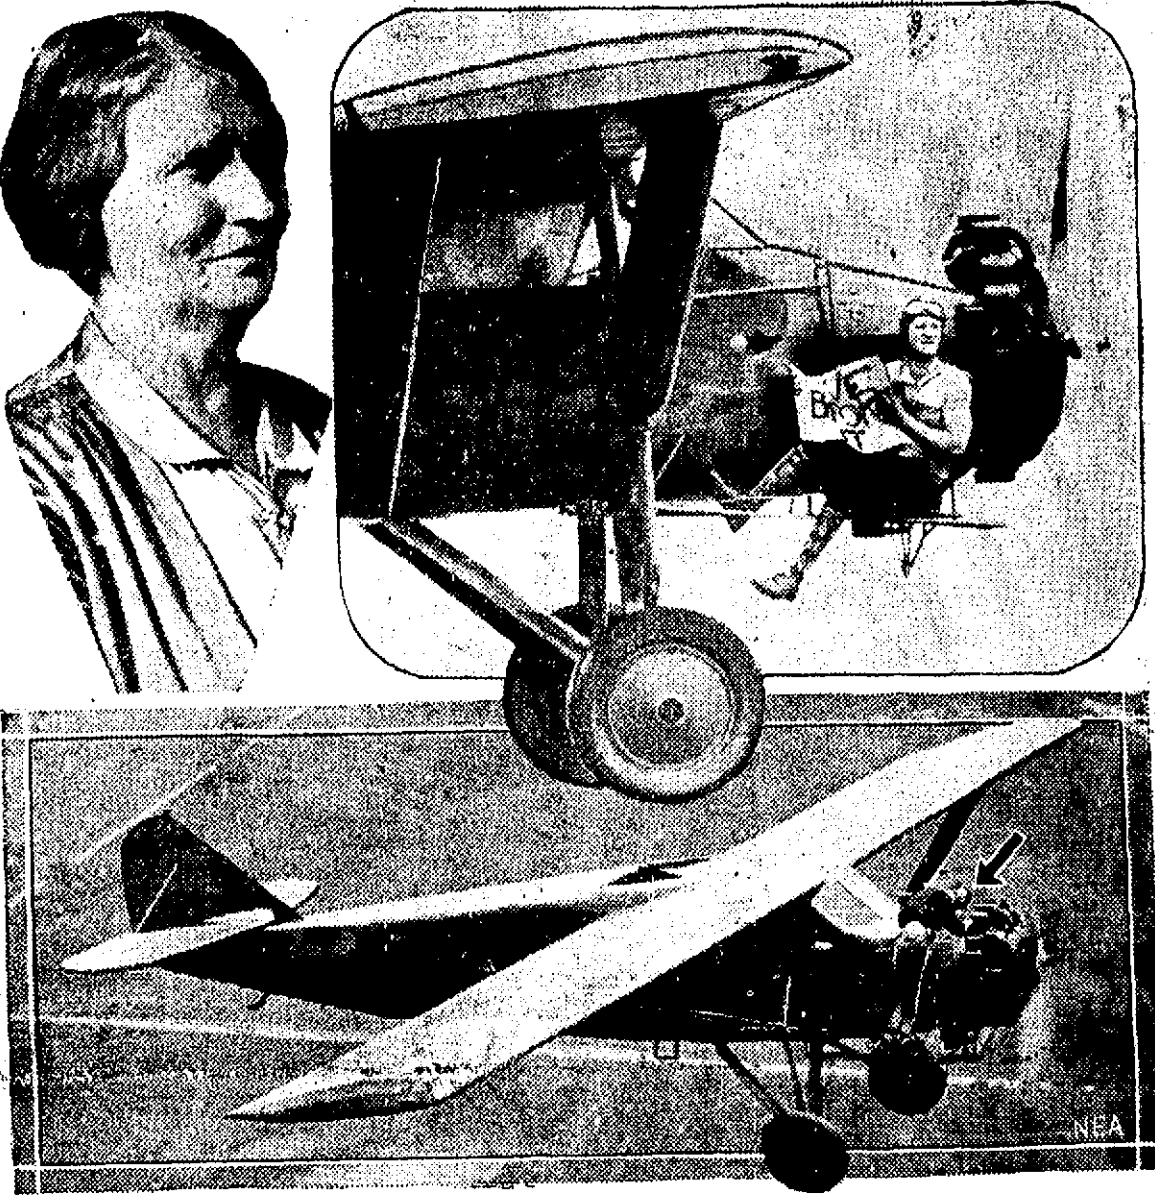

Foster was named by Peter von Franzus, a sporting goods dealer, as the man to whom he sold the revolver dropped by Lingle's murderer. The numbers had been obliterated from the revolver, but were learned through a secret process which brought them out and enabled the police to trace the gun from the factory to von Franzus who admitted after the Valentine Day massacre that he sold many machine guns to the "Bugs" Moran gang, as well as to the rivals of this gang. After the Lingle murder, he said that he sold the particular revolver to Foster at a time when Foster was an active member of the Moran mob.

Quarantine Will Soon Be Lifted From Counties That Have Dipped

NASHVILLE, July 1.—The last of the systematic dipping to be done in Howard county in connection with the tick eradication program was over Sunday it was reported by H. B. Aldridge, U. S. supervisor in charge of the work in the county.

Practically all of the cattle in the county had been released from dipping several months ago, a few being held under local quarantine because of small infestation.

The only work now remaining of the program is the patrolling of the county line to prevent re-infestation, and the probable dipping or spraying of animals which have been exposed. At a few vats in the county a dipping will be had in four weeks, this extra dipping being for range cattle to insure perfect freedom from ticks.

New Melon Advertising Pamphlet Prepared by Talbot Field

TIRE-COVERS SOON Expected To Arrive This Week—Florida Starts Festival

Rapid progress on plans for this year's Watermelon Festival, which will be held Thursday, August 7, was reported at a meeting of the committee chairman last night in Hope city hall with George W. Robinson, general chairman of the Festival.

Nominations are being obtained from the various townships of Hempstead county for the maids and queen contest, which begins next Monday, July 7, and runs through Saturday, July 26.

Voting tickets for the maids and queen contest were distributed the forepart of this week and will be given out to customers of local stores and other business houses beginning Saturday, July 5.

Melon Pamphlet Out

One of the most valuable advertising pamphlets ever developed for the Watermelon Festival came off the presses of the Arkansas Printing & Stationery Co. here this week under management of Talbot Field, who is distributing the pamphlets to local business houses who wish to buy them in large lots for use in their trade connections.

The pamphlet carries nine pictures of champion watermelons and leading Hempstead county growers; and it tells the story of the entire watermelon industry in this section. Mr. Field has already received orders for several thousand pamphlets, so that a complete pictorial story of the local development will be spread to every important business district in America by mid-summer.

Hope's famous advertising tire-covers, with a brand new Festival design for 1930, are expected to arrive here by the end of the week. Two hundred drum-type covers were ordered by the publicity committee, and will be placed on sale at all local gasoline and motor stations at cost.

Florida Holds Festival

The importance of continuing the annual Watermelon Festival was made apparent yesterday when G. J. MacGregor, manager of the Hope Basket company called attention of The Star to an item in the Kansas City Packer magazine telling of the melon festival recently launched at Leesburg, Fla.

In this competitive melon territory, the Lake counties' festival is held June 27, as compared to the first week in August for the Arkansas event. The Florida season, Mr. MacGregor observed, is from five to six weeks ahead of Arkansas and while the Hempstead county melon is unrivaled in size and flavor and fame, some organized effort such as the annual festival is necessary in order to hold up this section against organized competition as it appears in Florida, South Texas and elsewhere.

The other warehouse to be built will cost approximately $20,000 and will have a capacity of 200 bales of cotton. The projectors of the enterprise announced that the plants would be built on separate locations and both will be erected on switch tracks.

Girl Of 22 Keeps Check On Lake Forest Police

MARION HUNTSON
LAKE FOREST, Ill., July 1.—(AP)—Here in this fashionable Chicago suburb a 22-year-old girl sits behind the grating at police headquarters. The very feminine, but very efficient desk sergeant is Marion Huntson. Three years ago the police chief invited Marion to take the desk sergeant's job. She accepted with misgivings but since then she has found that her work does not lack in interest. Marion has a policeman's coat with brass buttons, the insignia of a sergeant, a shiny star. She has the right to carry a pistol, but she never has made an arrest. Besides booking troublesome customers of the police department, Miss Huntson keeps the department's records, and checks the calls of the men on the beats.

THE VALUE of SOUND DESIGN

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy

THE GOOD PERFORMANCE of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine. It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance.

Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot-spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

Robinson at the Festival

THE announcement Monday that Senator Joe T. Robinson would be a speaker at the Fifth Annual Watermelon Festival August 7, was good news to the committees in charge of this year's event.

It was during the presidential campaign of 1928 that Senator Robinson addressed the Third Annual Festival and drew the largest outdoor crowd in the history of the state. The 1929 Festival was not far short of equalling its immediate predecessor, but it is reassuring to know that Arkansas' most famous modern statesman will be with us again this year.

He comes to us at the most important moment of his career, and in a crucial hour for the Democratic party. It is no secret that Senator Robinson has done more to hold together bitterly hostile factions than has any other Democratic leader. Probably it is this fact that accounts for such opposition as appears against him. He is disliked for his failure to attack—but the truth is that the national Democratic party never was in more need of a leader who could bring about harmony, than in recent years.

It seems to us that Senator Robinson has been more successful in this than many might suppose. Despite the Democratic defeat in 1928, the percentage gulf between the two national parties was closed by nearly one half as compared to the defeats sustained in 1920 and 1924. Harding and Coolidge won by pluralities of approximately 7 million in a combined Republican and Democratic total of 24 million votes. But in 1928 the total vote was 36 million, yet the Democratic party lost by only 6 million. The Republican plurality in 1920 and in 1924 was approximately 29 per cent. But the campaign in which Arkansas' senator played such a leading part saw this plurality whittled down to 17 per cent.

As to what further services the party may require of Joe Robinson, only conjecture can tell. But the Arkansas senator stands ace-high among independent business men of the North and East, and is understood in those quarters to be a Democrat of the stamp of Grover Cleveland, for whom some Republicans bolted their party the only time in a generation of "voting the ticket straight."

Aside from mere party considerations, it is a magnificent thing to realize that a man born and bred in a rural county of an agricultural state should rise not only to eminence in his state, but becomes its highest representative in the national government, and is chosen by that government to represent all America in her foreign intercourse.

The picture we have had this last winter of Joe Robinson, plain Arkansas lawyer, meeting the English king, Britain's Labor prime minister, and envoys from the four corners of the earth, around the conference table at No. 10, Downing street, is a picture that will live forever in the hearts of Arkansas' citizens.

Tradition is a glorious thing. But it is never so remarkable as when some new figure steps forth to demonstrate that it is as eternal as the spirit of the nation. The public career of Joe Robinson is almost identical with the history of America's most famous men. It is gratifying to know that Arkansas produced him, that the nation is not yet finished with him, and that he will be the guest of Hope and Hempstead county at our biggest party, August 7.

They Charmed Boyhood

KIRK MUNROE died a few days back at 80, and the New York Evening Post notes that he was the last of the writers of boys' books whose annual output kept young America looking forward to Christmas and birthdays. A generation with graying temples looks back on its yesterdays to thrill to the adventure books of men who were the "old masters" of the writing trade to boyhood.

The juvenile is a book-type which merits more attention than it receives from historians of English literature, adds the Dallas News. For it has its distinct place. There are a few books that rank alike in the interest of young and old. "Treasure Island" is cherished as well as fifty as at fifteen. So, too, perhaps, are Conan Doyle's swashbuckling tales of "The White Company" and "Micah Clark." Some of Jules Verne's books, originally written for older audiences, have become juveniles with the passing of time. But these were not cases of men who set themselves to write down to adolescence.

Kirk Munroe did. So, too, did G. A. Henty, and Horatio Alger, and Edward Stratemeyer. So through them young America (and in Henty's case young England) formed ideals of the admirable clean sportsmanship, learned a little history, and was vastly entertained. It is a pity that they are gone, more so because there are few revivals of the successful boy's book of yesterday. There is always a new crop of writing men. They are writing good books, too. But the man of fifty who was a boy of fifteen will feel a twinge of regret that his own youngster may not get to read "Flamingo Feather" or "At War With Pontiac."

Chinese Wash Boy Leaves Tombstone

First Time in History of Western City That It Is Without Washboy

Student Makes Fine Record at University

TOMBSTONE, Ariz., July 2.—(U.P.)—While cities and towns throughout the United States are pointing with pride to increased census returns, Tombstone—once the hilarious double-barreled mining metropolis of the West—was mourning the passing of one of her most colorful inhabitants—the inevitable Chinese laundryman.

For the first time in the picturesque town's hectic history, the community located midst grotesque boulders set like white-caps on a restless sea and flanked by barren sands baked for ages under a withering sun, is without its "chinee washee boy."

This latest calamity to befall Tombstone came to pass when Wong Dee Hong, the decaying mining-town's sole laundry proprietor, packed his belongings and with his wife, Wong Hong, and their son, Wong, Jr., departed for Phoenix.

With this exodus of Chinese, only two celestials remains in the town which once boasted the largest Chinese population between the Mississippi river and the Pacific Coast. The survivors, both aged relics of a glorious past, are Ah Lum, chef for the past century at the Bar-O ranch, and Quong Gee Kee, a retired cook who awaits the bid of his ancestors to join them by way of the famous Boot Hill graveyard, where many of his countrymen lie buried.

Perhaps it is only superstition, but the two remaining Chinese are certain that the ghosts of the once thriving silver mining town have called down their wrath on Wong Dee Hong for deserting beloved Tombstone. Ah Lum is convinced the souls of Yee Yee, who 30 years ago opened his "six-fingered" laundry there, has gathered about him in one of the gullies winding into the adjacent hills, his fellow-residents of Boot Hill for the purpose of wreaking vengeance upon Wong Dee Hong for his desertion of the former Gay Paree of the wastelands.

Seated immobile and staring at the deserted buildings which once teemed with life, the two aged Chinese visualize the far distant days when Ed Scheffelin, founder of the bonanza mining town, swaggered through the streets, six-guns hanging in the alert position, white teeth gleaming through his tolling, henna-hued beard and his wild hair sprawling over his ample shoulders.

On a side street which formed a junction with the main stage highway to Bisbee to the south and Tucson to the north, there existed in that day a large Chinatown. Everywhere appeared signs designating business establishments of Chinese merchants, laundrymen, and purveyors of victuals. Old Ah Lum himself was a partner of Ah Sing in the famous Can Can restaurant in which Eddie Foy often rendered innumerable piano recitals and Lotta Crabtree accompanied with popular songs of the day. And there were pistol duels there, too.

Ah Lum can recall evenings when a turn of the wheel changed the savings of a lifetime for one miner's "poke" to another's—Ah Lum was no mean gambler himself.

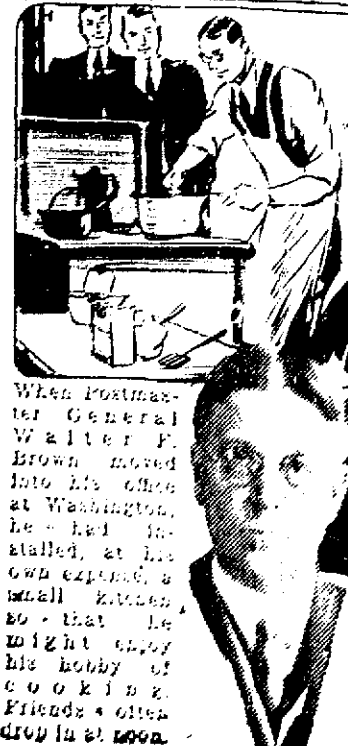

Sadly, he might recall the Chinese Masonic lodge annual banquets in which prominent celestials from the countryside attended. As his pale eyes survey the almost abandoned street, they rest for the moment on what was once the Chinese headquarters, when torn down, revealed a labyrinth of tunnels in which opium smoking utensils were found, and which gave evidence of use as a depot in the underground railroad by which Orientals were smuggled into the country.

And now another leaf turns over towards Fins for Tombstone. A mining town with no Chinese laundrymen to scrub hickory shirts and canvas dresses! Ah Lum and Quong Gee Kee sadly scrutinize the desolate street before them—the remnant of what once was the glory of Old Arizona.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The House investigation of the red radicals, sponsored, launched and championed by Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York, will move in July up to the chairman's own bailiwick, where Mr. Fish hopes it will be getting a lot more publicity than it has had in its first few days.

The country's complete failure to get excited about this investigation of Communist activities is a source of worry not only to Mr. Fish but to other members who hoped there would be good political material in it and to those burning patriots whose chief mission is convincing the nation that it stands in great danger of a bolshevik revolution.

The Forgeries Hurt
Mr. Fish started under several handicaps. He led the anti-red hue and cry after Police Commissioner Whelan of New York had unearthed "documents from Moscow" purporting to link the Amort Trading Corporation of New York with Communist International activities in America. The movement lost much steam when the documents were proved to be forgeries concocted in New York.

Then Mr. Fish proceeded to dampen his own fireworks by calling before the committee some inveterate critics of the Soviet government and communism whose views were already quite well known to the country. One of the most distinguished of these witnesses rather ruined the effect of his evidence by asserting that actual was the menace to our educational institutions that for two hours the red flag had flown over the University of Chicago. That sounded a little bit too wild to be true—and it was, as the committee soon found out.

Secret testimony was given by certain selected government officials, including some of the anti-red propagandists, but you can't get much publicity out of secret testimony. Both the State and Justice Departments had previously said they had no evidence of Communist plots.

Mr. Fish certainly hopes to put on a better show in his own home town. And it might be suggested that the taxpayers ought to show more interest. They have invested $25,000 for this thing. Or, at least, the House has invested it for them.

Unless something unexpected is uncovered—and there's always that chance—the principal discovery in New York is likely to be the fact, not quite successfully concealed hitherto, that there are a few thousand Communists in the country whose idea of revolutionary strategy is to stage unemployment demonstrations with a view to getting themselves beaten over the head by squads of enthusiastic cops. Any taxpayer who has been afflicted by more serious suspicions may consequently be able to figure that Mr. Fish has given the nation $25,000 worth of relief.

I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce. I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give 'Kruschen Salts' a fair trial. The Arbiters Battle

UMPIRES get so lonesome for an argument that after the games they battle among themselves. Strange but true.

For weeks, in hotel lobbies and on trains, the umpires argued the question, "Who is the world's greatest ball player?" Bill McGowan, the wizard of Wilmington, stoutly defended Al Simmons. Tommy Connolly, ancient of days, declared for Mickey Cochran. Van Graffen voted with Connolly. They fought it out verbally, hour after hour, with McGowan steadfastly upholding Simmons.

Ahead of the Batter

"HE does everything right," "HE" shouted McGowan. "The greatest man in the league at bat, and one of the finest fly-catchers in baseball history. He hits at the right time and you never see him make a wrong move in the outfield. He's ahead of the batter up there, all the time. Knows just where a hit is going when—" "Yes," Connolly interrupted, "but where would the Athletics be without Cochran's spirit and inspiration? And don't forget he's no stranger with the bat, either."

Asks Mickey

SO, on and on, for weeks the argument continued, with each of the umpires refusing to give in. Finally, one day when McGowan was behind the plate in Detroit, he mentioned the subject to Cochran.

"Listen, Mickey, I got a question for you to answer," said Bill. "Who is the greatest player in baseball today?"

And the reply, without hesitation was:

"Al Simmons!"

Mickey, however, was not with-

Another Cup for Bobby Jones

The eminent Mr. Robert T. Jones of Atlanta, Ga., U. S. A., has another bright and shining trophy to put up on the shelf for folks to admire back home. It's the British Amateur Cup—the only major golf trophy that remained for him to win—and here you see him, at sight, receiving the coveted prize from Colonel Skeen, captain of the Royal and Ancient golf Club at St. Andrews, Scotland. Jones defeated Roger Wethered, 7 and 6, to win the championship.

Lord Thompson, however, stressed that the two British dirigibles were superior to the German craft. Although he declined to elucidate, it was learned from reliable authorities that zeppelins now being built in the United States will pattern the former's construction in the British zeppelins.

Another theory of German construction has a tendency to be opposed by the British. This is the margin ratio between the diameter and length of the zeppelin. The British are inclined to favor the squatter form of craft maintaining it has less air resistance.

It is claimed in British air circles that they prevent a certain amount of sagging in the fabric of the ship thus facilitating its movements. The German experts, however, are inclined to look doubtfully upon this construction, maintaining it adds weight to the craft and should have the effect of making it additionally cumbersome.

French Troops Leave Germany

Spectacle Colorful As Troops Start March to Homeland

MALENCE, Germany, July 2.—(AP)—The last troops of the French army of occupation evacuated Mayence Monday at 1:30 p. m.

Colorful spectacle preceded the departure of French troops from German soil.

Long before noon the populace began to gather in the court facing the former ducal palace, which had been the headquarters of General Guillaumat, commander in chief of the French army of occupation.

At 10:30 a. m. the last battalion of the French garrison of Mayence marched briskly into the court playing martial airs and with flags flying. At exactly 11:10 a. m. General Guillaumat, in full regalia, came out of the headquarters accompanied by President Tirard of the inter-allied Rhineland commission, who was attired in the conventional cutaway and carried a walking stick. He had just arrived from the Wiesbaden evacuation ceremony.

The troops saluted General Guillaumat and his companion, then, at the word of command, snapped into a salute with their eyes raised to the tricolor fluttering above the palace. The band struck up the Marseillaise and the colors slowly descended. As they disappeared the music ceased.

There was a moment of silence, then a sudden spontaneous yell from thousands of German throats. The single shout was followed by instant silence. The troops were in motion. Evacuation had taken place.

But until the town clock marks midnight and the church bells sound the "liberation," theoretical French occupation will continue. The German celebration is to start at midnight and continue until dawn.

Anniversary of Graf Zeppelin

Eleven Years Have Seen Many Daring Aerial Exploits

LONDON, July 1.—(UP)—Eleven years ago today scores of workmen toiled feverishly in a huge shed at the East Fortune aerodrome near Edinburgh, Scotland.

Inside lay the R-34, Great Britain's mightiest zeppelin.

While train engineers inspected its fabric, officers examined engines, other machinery and stored its provisions.

At 1:33 a. m. on July 2, the giant, cigar-shaped bag left the ground. It was bound for America on the first flight of a dirigible across the Atlantic.

Thus, the sensational air voyage served as a forerunner of transforming one of the deadliest weapons of modern warfare into an important arm of commerce and transportation.

Today the world has seen many conquests of the air. They include the Lindbergh trans-Atlantic flight; the San Francisco-Australian flight by Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith; the Graf Zeppelin's trips, and many other notable ventures.

The future of the zeppelin, air authorities throughout the world agree, is assured. And Great Britain's officials point with pride to her two lighter-than-air craft, the R100 and the R101.

It fell to the lot of Lord Thomson, Secretary of State for Air, recently in the House of Commons to anticipate probable queries on why these dirigibles should be in their sheds while the Graf Zeppelin was flying around the world.

He pointed out the Germans had had 30 years' experience in building ships of this kind and paid a high compliment to the skipper of the Graf Zeppelin when he said:

"There are few Dr. Eckeners in the world. We have not had time to produce our Dr. Eckeners."

The Hope Star goes into most all of the homes in Hope. It is also to be found on the reading table of many of the homes in neighboring towns in this trade territory. And more than two-thirds of the Hope Star's subscribers live upon rural routes in this immediate trade territory—from Nashville to Buckner, and from Prescott to the Red River. These homes have come to depend upon the columns of the Hope Star. Some of the readers may want to buy the very things you want to sell. The rates are reasonable.

No Limit! No Obligation! No Cost! FREE!

Free want-ads will not be run for real-estate dealers, rental agents, or merchants when advertising their wares. To all others, the offer is absolutely wide open to the limit of our capacity.

"Keyed ads" or blind ads, in which replies come in care of the Hope Star are regularly 25c extra, and this same charge must be made on these ads on this want-ad bargain day.

NO FREE WANT-ADS WILL BE ACCEPTED OVER THE TELEPHONE. Write out your want-ad just as you would wish it to appear, and bring it or mail it to this office before Thursday night at midnight. Please be sure that names are plainly spelled.

Remember, the more you tell the quicker you sell.

Don't expect a little want-ad to work miracles—it won't do it. Don't expect to sell some second-hand article for the price of a new one, for want-ads won't do it. However, want-ads can call the attention of prospective purchasers to where the article may be found. After that, your sale depends upon the value and merit of the article offered. But you will be surprised how many people will be interested in the very things for which you no longer find a need.

We would like to carry a full page of free want-ads next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. We want you to see for yourself just how you can use them to your own profit, day after day. But be sure to bring in your want-ad by Wednesday night, as this offer may never be repeated.

In this special offer you don't even owe us a "Thank you." Our offer is purely mercenary. When you find the value and profit of reading these little ads each day, you will become a more or less regular reader and patron of this interesting department of the Hope Star. In the long run we expect to get our money back—but Thursday only you get as many want-ads as you like, all to run three days, at absolutely no cost to you.

HEROES ARE MADE - NOT BORN.

Officers were baffled in their search for the slayer of the man for lack of clues. It was not until last Friday when some neighbors of Wallace came to Sheriff J. D. Treece and told him that Russell had expressed a threatening attitude toward the recluses that the police took their first definite step in the case. They arrested Russell on suspicion in connection with Wallace's death. They would not reveal what evidence they had against the accused young farmer.

Russell has a wife and one child.

Experts Here For Study of County

Will Classify Lands of the County For Crop Best Suited

A study of the economic use of land for crops, livestock, and farming in marginal farming areas was launched Tuesday in Hempstead county by the departments of rural economics and sociology and horticulture and forestry of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture in cooperation with the Southern Forest Experiment Station of the United States Forest Service.

Orville J. Hall and R. P. Holdsworth of the College of Agriculture, who are the project leaders in this study, arrived in Hope Tuesday. The field work of this investigation will require approximately four weeks of surveying. Mr. Hayes and Mr. Craig of the United States Forest Service have been here 10 days making preliminary studies.

The purpose of this investigation is to find the financial basis where lands used for crops, livestock, and forestry become marginal for their different uses.

The study will be made in areas of the state that, at prevailing prices of farm products, appear to be marginal for crop purposes. Detailed surveys will be made to determine the receipts, expenses and net income by enterprises. The investigation will be extended to other areas where detailed soil surveys have been made, and special attention will be given to returns in relation to soil types. Crop yields and the usual practices in crop production will be obtained for a period of years, and the farm income analysis will be made for this year. In connection with the forest study of the investigation, special data on forestry and forest products on surveyed farms will be obtained. Such data will include sales, stands of timber, annual growth, and care of woodland.

Attention will be given to the classification of land for crops, livestock, and forestry production. In short, the investigation will be made to determine the most desirable use to which different classes of land may be put, which is expected to furnish a basis for a sound agricultural and forestry policy in the areas studied.

Chiropractor To Open Office Here

Dr. T. H. Cleveland Will Open Office in This City Soon

Dr. Thos. W. Cleveland of Prescott will open a branch office in Hope at the New Capitol Hotel at an early date. He will come here from Prescott three mornings each week for the present, with anticipation of dividing his time half in Hope and half in Prescott just as soon as business will warrant his doing so.

Dr. Cleveland comes to Hope well recommended, having handled a number of Hope people at his office in Prescott. He is a graduate of the Palmer School of Chiropractic at Davenport, Iowa, the home of Radio Broadcasting Station WOC. He has been practicing his profession nine years, six of these having been in Texas, the latter three in Arkansas at Prescott. His office will be equipped with the latest instruments used in chiropractic analysis, the neurotonometer, an instrument used in locating nerve pressure along the course of the spinal column.

Dr. Cleveland says Hope is a logical location for a permanent chiropractic office, as the people of Hempstead county need a Chiropractor, there being no licensed chiropractor in the county. His ad will appear in an early issue of this paper announcing his opening.

"Konjola Surely Real Medicine," Says Happy Man

Rheumatism and Neuritis Yield to This New and Different Compound

Here is good news for victims of rheumatism and neuritis, who may have the fear that there is no relief from these dread ailments. Day after day Konjola continues to win victories over these ills, just as in the case of Mr. Nick Millick, 1022 s Russell Boulevard, St. Louis, who says:

"I had chronic constipation and bloating after meals, and then rheumatism and neuritis developed in my arms and shoulders. I suffered intensely. My kidneys were affected, too, and I had to get up frequently at night. After completing the fourth bottle of Konjola, I felt like a different man. Rheumatism and neuritis are gone; kidneys are corrected and indigestion is no more. Konjola surely is a real medicine."

Konjola, all of its 32 ingredients working together, does act quickly, but a complete treatment of from to eight bottles is strongly recommended.

Konjola is sold in Hope, Arkansas at Bryant's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

The rate was said to have been published in a Rome paper June 30, but it was thirty-six hours before the bombshell exploded. It is thought that this is the first revolt toward American automobile manufacturers against the American tariff schedule.
